Twelve thousand fans for the Champions and the Roanoke Highlanders divide honors in the first double bill of the season yesterday afternoon at Broad Street Park. The teams fought savagely every inning, and brilliant fielding and heartbreaking situations were crowded into each one of the twenty-four rounds played. Although they had lesser scores in the early chapters, it was not until the ninth round of the opening struggle that the fans suffered their first real acute attack of heart disease. Then the Champions tied up the score and sent the game into the extra innings. The fight warriors from the hills of Virginia fought grimly on, and the tenth and eleventh innings passed into history without either side scoring. The twelfth, however, marked the doom of the Colts.
The Highlanders copied the contest by count of 5. A sign went up from the "Smiling Dutch" Reville did battle with the ex-Pirate, Bobbly, in the second battle, and a smiling boy emerged from the conflict with his eleventh victory of the season. The Highlanders fought hard to the game, and were in the running until the last man died in the good-guy frame. The score was 1 to 0.

During the two games practically every man on each team distinguished himself by pulling off some fast fielding, but it remained for Arthur Smith, the greatest of 'em all, to make the one great play of the day. It came in the sixth round of the second melo, when Big Chief Shaughnessy was reposing on first. Holland took a terrific swing at one of Reville's shots, and he sent the ball soaring toward the club house. A sign went up from the hills of Virginia that it was impossible for Smith to even get within a dozen yards of the ball, already Shaughnessy was tearing round second base. But Smith has habit of accomplishing the seemingly impossible, and he recrossed the plate, took a flying leap in the air, snatched the ball with his gloved hand. A great shout went up from the assembled thousands, for once more Smith had saved the day. And more. In the next round Arthur came in for his applause when he scored the only run of the game, after cracking a bailing single to left.

Harry Bussey and Walter Doane were opposing pitchers in the opening game, and for the first four innings it looked as though the Champions could score a shut-out. Bussey was fine form, and only two men reached him in the first four rounds, one of them getting a very lucky scratch hit.

In the fifth round the Highlanders began hammering Bussey, and they scored one run over the man in the pitch. Presley opened with the first of his four two-baggers of the afternoon. He advanced to third on an error, and counted on Ryan's single to left.

The run knotted the score, as the Champs had taken an early lead, getting one over in the second on a pass, Ryan's wild throw, a sacrifice and Messitt's single to center. One more in the sixth, and the game was heavy doubled to left and scored when Jimmy Ison let Holland's slow roller get by him. Painter forced Holland at second, and Presley followed with his second two-bagger, sending Zimmerman back to the side by a pitching out. And it was the third time that "Tyde" had fanned during the game.

base, and the manager raced to third.
Holland then sent a long drive to left, and Seiber pulled it down after a fine run. Newton scored on the sacrifice.
Painter then came forth with his second double of the game, and counted on Presley's third hit, a single to left field.

After Lipe and Kanzler had died in Richmond's half of the twelfth, Smith singled to left field, but Shaughnessy made a pretty catch of Sandherr's line drive to right, and victory No. 1 was rung up for Roanoke. Here are the figures of that victory.

The second game was a brilliant pitching battle between Reville and Vall. Both men were given superb and at times sensational work, and several times lightning fielding cut off healthy base wallows.

Reville opened up in fine form, and only two Roanoke men reached him in the first five rounds. Presley continued for another of his famous two-baggers in the second round, and Doyle drawing the only pass of the game in the fifth. Frequently, when danger threatened, Reville fanned his men. He struck out seven in the game.

Vall had easy sailing in the first round, but Sandherr opened the second with one of his favorite swats, a triple between right and center fields.
Titman flew out to left, and Holland struck out at third. Ison then hit a slow one to Doyle, who threw Sand-herr out at the plate. Then Ison was caught attempting to steal second.
Messitt and Reville singled in the third round after one was out, but Lipe and Kanzler could not connect safely.

The Champs cracked the ice in the seventh. Smith opened with a hard drive over Newton's head and was sacrificed to second by Sandy. With Titman at the bat, Smith got a good lead and dashed for third. He would have stolen the base easily, but Guy was taking no chances, so he smushed a fine single to left, and Smith went home. Titman tried to stretch it to a double, and was out, Holland to Newton.

After Doyle had sent a liner to Smith in center in the eighth, Ryan banged the ball between right and center and it rolled to the fence. Guy Titman was after it at full speed, but at that, Ryan figured that he had as much license to get a three-bagger on this hit as Sandherr did in the second, and he chased to third. Well, Ryan didn't have the right, because Titman made a great throw from the fence to Sandherr at second and Sanderr made a quick relay to Lipe, and Ryan was out a block.

"Dutch" Gets Second Hit.
"Dutch" banged another single to right in the eighth, but Shaughnessy tried to rob him by a fast throw to Presley. After the first out, the bag, Reville sat down for a rest. The hit to Newton, who touched second, retiring Reville, and completed a double to Presley.

With two down in the closing half of the ninth, Presley batted his second two-bagger of the afternoon and the crowd became alarmed. Tydemann, a weak batter, was next in order, but Manager Shaughnessy suddenly remembered that Tyde had fanned five times during the first four rounds, and he was scared. "Dutch" was there with his nerve in the pinch, as usual, and the best Reynolds could do was to hit a grounder between short and right. Boss Lipe ran over, made a great pick-up and a still greater whinto Jay Kanzler, and everybody went home happy.

KETCHEL WANTS FIRST CRACK AT JACK JOHNSON

Willus Britt Will Protest Proposed Match Between Negro Champion and Kaufman.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
NEW YORK, June 12.—Stanley Ketchel, the much-talked-of middleweight champion, left here to-day with his manager, Willus Britt, for California, where he will defend his title in a forty-five round bout with Bill Papeke at Colma on July 5. Britt said:
"We are going to protest against the proposed match between Kaufman and Johnson if Promoter Coffroth is inclined to make a bid for it, as Ketchel is entitled to first chance at the negro champion. I have been advised that the sporting public in California is behind Ketchel in this demand, and that as a result there will be no interest in the proposed affair with Kaufman, who doesn't figure high up in the calculations on the coast. We will guarantee to fight Kaufman if we beat Johnson, and will also take on Sam Langford."

Ketchel will have a rest after the Papeke mill, and will begin training for the Johnson fight about the first of September. That will give him six weeks for hard work, and he'll be in wonderful shape when he gets into the ring with the negro on October 12. I shall insist upon Jeffries as referee, but if Johnson objects, then any of the competent referees in Frisco will do. We simply want to get Johnson inside the ropes, and then Ketchel will do the rest. As manager of Battling Nelson, you can say for me that he will make a match with Freddie Welsh, to take place at Colma in September, or just before the Ketchel-Johnson fight. Nelson will take Welsh on for forty-five rounds and bet as much on the side as Welsh cares to risk."

WALDO MAKES GREAT FINISH

GRAVESEND, N. Y., June 12.—J. R.
Keene's Hilarious, a 4 to 5 favorite, easily won the Carlton Stake, one mile, at Gravesend to-day, but his rider, Butwell, came very near tossing the victory away by easing up his mount too soon. Hilarious took a six length lead going around the lower turn. But-well then took a good hold of his head and let him race along. At the turn into the stretch he began to ease him up, but here Joe Madden came on with a rush, and Hilarious just won by half a length.

Waldo, after a remarkable run, won the Manhanstet Stake, Ho was lengths behind the field at the turn into the stretch, but closed with a rush and won going away by one and one-half lengths. Summaries:
First race—Hilarious, two-year-olds, selling, five and a half furlongs, $100 added—Crossover (2 to 1) first, May Florence (7 to 10) second, Hudas Sister and a half, $500 added—Sanctus (9 to 1) second, Jimmy Lane (9 to 5) second, Oakland (4 to 1) third. Time, 5:01.

Third race—the Manhanstet, two-year-olds, five and a half furlongs,

RED SOX LOSE ONE AND WIN ONE AT LYNCHBURG

TRUCKERS WIN OUT
IN NINTH INNING

Two Errors and Guiheen's Single Give Portsmouth 1-to-0 Victory Over Norfolk.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
PORTSMOUTH, V.A., June 12.—Foxen had all the best of a great pitchers' battle to-day with Long John Fox, but, despite the errors, the latter was given sensational support, and not untill the ninth did the Truckers succeed in pushing around the winning tally for a 1 to 0 victory.

The fielding of Portsmouth was exceptionally clean, but it was easy sailing they had thanks to the brilliant pitching they were backing. In the ninth Valdolo's error and an infield grounder that was poorly handled and Guiheen's single decided the game.

Moser Invincible in First Game and Shoemakers Score Shut Out.

BUGS RUN AWAY WITH SECOND

Vernuelle and Griffin Are Hit Hard, Danville Piling Up Twelve Runs.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LYNCHBURG, V.A., June 12.—Lynchburg and Danville divided a doubleheader here this afternoon, the Shoemakers taking the first game, 1 to 0, and the Red Sox running away with the second, 12 to 4.

Moser had the better of Mayberry in a pitchers' battle in the opening game.
Moser's support was glib-edged, this being the first errorless game of the season here. Mayberry was given sensational support at times, but his undoing came about in the sixth, when he was unable to locate the plate.

Jackson opened with a single. Mayberry then hit Hooker and uncorked a wild pitch. Jackson scored on Taylor's hit to left field. On three occasions a single would have given the Red Sox a score, but Moser was invincible on such times.

In the second game Vernuelle lasted three innings and Morrissey four, though Vernuelle should have been relieved in the second. In the fourth Morrissey was driven out and Loos stopped the onslaught. Griffin checked the victory in the fifth, and after that they hit him right along. Powell's fielding was the best of the visitors, while Taylor put up a great game for the locals. The score:
